Fall Exhibition:

Star Power: Edward Steichen's Glamour Photography

October 16, 2018 – January 6, 2019

Included with Museum admission

The Flagler Museum will launch its 2018 – 2019 "Season of Style" with Star Power: Edward Steichen's Glamour Photography, an exhibition of more than 80 dramatic black and white portraits of celebrities and fashion models from the 1920s and 30s by Edward Steichen (1879-1973), one of the most prolific and influential figures in the history of photography.

In 1923 Steichen, already a famous painter and fine art photographer, was offered the prestigious position of chief photographer for Vogue and Vanity Fair, the influential fashion and society magazines published in New York by Condé Nast. Throughout his fifteen years at the magazines Steichen produced some of the most striking creations of twentieth-century photography, showcasing the culture of that era and its most prominent stars from the realms of literature, journalism, dance, sport, politics, theatre, and film. In addition to stunning fashion photographs from Worth and Poiret to Chanel and Schiaparelli, Steichen created bold and engaging portraits of Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich, George Gershwin, Walt Disney, and hundreds of other celebrities. Since the 1930s, however, few of these prints have been exhibited or published.

Organized by the Foundation for the Exhibition of Photography, Minneapolis / New York City / Paris / Lausanne, in collaboration with the Flagler Museum, Star Power features more than 80 stunning celebrity portraits and fashion photographs in vintage prints, nearly all taken for Condé Nast magazines. Lenders to the exhibition are Mary and Leigh Block Museum of Art, Northwestern University; George Eastman Museum; Los Angeles County Museum of Art; and Whitney Museum of American Art, New York.

Guided exhibition tours will be offered Wednesdays at 12:00 pm, beginning October 24. The exhibition and tours are free with Museum admission.

A lavishly illustrated companion volume, Edward Steichen: In High Fashion, The Condé Nast Years, 1923 – 1937, is available in the Museum Store. This stunning work, published by the Foundation for the Exhibition of Photography, documents the seminal period in Steichen's career.

The Fall Exhibition is sponsored in part by The Eliasberg Family Foundation, Templeton & Company, the Hilton West Palm Beach, the Palm Beach County Board of County Commissioners, the Tourist Development Council, the Cultural Council of Palm Beach County, and Florida Department of State, Division of Cultural Affairs.

In the Days of Chic: The Early Days of Glamour Photography with Edward Steichen

Nathalie Herschdorfer, exhibition curator and director of the Museum of Fine Arts, Le Locle, Switzerland

3:00 pm on Thursday, November 15, 2018. Museum admission is included.

In the 1920s, publisher Condé Nast set out to educate public tastes by defining the identity and style of the modern woman through his magazines Vogue and Vanity Fair. From 1923 to 1937, photographer Edward Steichen merged fashion and society photography in his work for the publications. Stars of the silver screen slowly replaced the anonymous models of the magazine's earlier fashion shots. Clara Bow, Lillian Gish, Pola Negri, Mary Pickford, and Gloria Swanson all came to embody the idea of chic. These new fashion house ambassadors promoted a lifestyle defined by elegance, beauty, and leisure, thus fueling the dreams of countless female readers.

Selling Celebrity: Edward Steichen's Portrait Revolution

Scott Eyman, best-selling author and critic

6:00 pm on Thursday, November 29, 2018

Edward Steichen's glamorous portraits were carefully designed to appeal to the elite audience of Condé Nast's magazines. Hollywood photographers either depicted movie stars in character, or in supposedly relaxed, at-home candids. Conventional ideas of glamour were almost always in force. Steichen, who usually worked in New York, was free to invent alternate personas, or to photograph his subjects as he saw them, irrespective of their screen image. Through the enormous popularity of these images Steichen arguably became the first example of the photographer as celebrity, and his magazine work changed photographic portraiture forever.

In the early decades of the twentieth century, jewelry makers in Great Britain, on the Continent, and in the United States created alternative styles to mainstream jewelry. In some countries, women became jewelry designers and fabricators in their own right – in others, they became the jewelry artist's muse. Ms. Karlin will provide an overview of the exhibition and discuss the impact of women on the art jewelry movement. A catalogue signing will follow the lecture. Funded by The Richard H. Driehaus Foundation.

Free for Sustaining-level Members and above

$10 for Individual and Family-level Members
$20 for Non-members
Advance purchase required

Even today, Jane Addams is remembered as a key figure in social and political reform during the Gilded Age. In rebellion against her privileged upbringing, she moved at age 29 to the heavily industrialized Near West Side of Chicago, where an immigrant community struggled to keep poverty at bay. There Addams co-founded the nation's first settlement house, Hull House, in 1889. Neighbors – adults and children – soon told her of the harsh working conditions and low pay they endured in factory work. Corrupt local government led to poor garbage services that Addams and other women could do little to improve without the vote. Learning from these experiences, Jane Addams emerged as a national leader of such progressive reforms as child labor, women's suffrage, and, as war broke out, world peace. In 1931 she became the first American woman to receive the Nobel Peace Prize. Knight will share stories of these achievements to illustrate Addams's concept of democratic citizenship.
